"It has everything one wants just now in a textbook" . . .

We are quoting from one of the many letters we have received in praise of LA RÉPUBLIQUE DU SILENCE, edited by A. J. Liebling and Eugene Jay Sheffer.

And we should like to emphasize those two important words, "just now," because it is the college French student of today who will get the most out of this collection of war-time writings by members of the French Underground . . . this eloquent Story of French Resistance.

In LA RÉPUBLIQUE DU SILENCE student and teacher will find more than just a language text, for in it they will be confronted with the tough fighting spirit of a nation waging a war of ideas against a powerful aggressor.

It is not an easy book, although the constructive notes, complete vocabulary, and running commentary bring it within the range of the average second-year student. Harold Clapp of Grinnell College feels that "maybe it will not go easily . . . but it is worth trying like the very devil to make it go."

McCall Maxwell of Lake Forest "cannot hesitate to recommend the book" . . . Germaine Mercier of the University of Wisconsin has found its use "one of the most stirring and encouraging experiences of her career" . . . Ian Forbes Fraser of Columbia University has "never known such enthusiasm for a French text" . . . Morris Bishop of Cornell University thinks "the success of this book is a matter of great concern" to the teaching profession.

If you have never seen LA RÉPUBLIQUE DU SILENCE and would like to consider it for your classes, just mail the reply card today. If you already know the book, won't you let us have your comments . . . and your plans for its use?

Very truly yours
